Destination Tairāwhiti

Whatungarongaro te tangata, toitū te whenua. As man disappears from sight, the land remains.

Tairāwhiti, the first place in the world to feel the sun on the dawn of a new day, is a beautiful and treasured slice of Aotearoa. From sacred mountains steeped in cultural heritage, to the spectacular beauty of the Pacific Ocean coastline, there are stunning areas of natural beauty around every corner.

Tairāwhiti is full of people who came for a holiday and stayed for the lifestyle. It offers a laid back, easy pace that allows visitors to take a moment and reflect on the simple pleasures of life. A visit to Tairāwhiti is purposeful, with the clear intention of travelling to the region to experience all it has to offer.

The region enjoys a great climate with loads of sunshine hours and opportunities for visitors to enjoy outdoor activities in stunning natural environments. Combined with the welcoming nature of the community, you have a visitor experience and destination that is second to none.

Tairāwhiti is a land of stories and storytellers, just waiting for visitors to experience the East Coast manaakitanga and build lasting relationships with the whenua and people.

A Destination Management Approach

The Government's Destination Management Guidelines consider the broader trends and challenges faced by the tourism industry. The guidelines acknowledge that tourism, both domestically and globally, has experienced substantial growth over time, leading to concerns about its sustainability and impact on destinations.

Destination - Te Tairāwhiti

The primary focus on increasing visitor numbers and spending in many regions has led to some destinations experiencing unsustainable growth, resulting in negative effects on the environment, culture, and communities. Destination management has emerged as a critical strategy to address these issues and ensure that tourism reflects the aspirations of New Zealanders while maximising benefits and minimising adverse impacts.

In this context, Tairāwhiti is comparatively remote, and the region's isolation presents an opportunity to apply destination management practices that consider national priorities. Through careful management of tourism growth, the region can achieve a balance between economic development, cultural preservation, social wellbeing, and environmental protection.

This approach aligns with national aspirations for sustainable development, where regenerative tourism enhances the overall wellbeing of communities while maintaining the country's unique natural and cultural assets.

Post COVID and the impacts of global travel disruptions, there is a heightened need to reevaluate destination management strategies. The Government recognises the importance of bold and innovative initiatives that align tourism with their broader sustainable development goals. By fostering economic opportunities and responsible tourism practices, the national context of destination management aims to create a resilient and thriving tourism industry that benefits local communities and visitors alike. This approach seeks to ensure that tourism contributes positively to New Zealand's overall wellbeing for generations to come.

Engagement Process

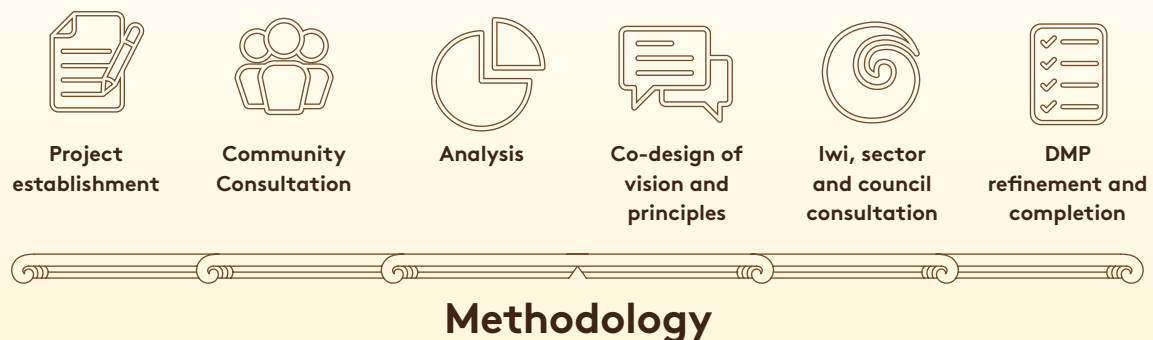

A crucial aspect of the destination management process involves understanding and incorporating the future aspirations of the residents, workers, visitors, and those engaged in the region. The priorities in this plan were shaped by community engagement and will serve as a roadmap to achieve their aspirations.

The initial engagement phase was integral to achieving local support for the DMP. Consultation with a broad range of stakeholders - including mana whenua, residents, tourism operators, the wider business community, and Government - led to a comprehensive understanding of the tourism landscape and opportunities to shape future planning and development.

The engagement involved a range of methods. Key stakeholders actively participated in meetings, providing valuable insights. Smaller meetings were held with various interest groups to understand opportunities across sectors, while tourism aspirations from iwi flight plans laid a foundation for ongoing discussions.

The Social Pinpoint online platform enabled community input through a virtual ideas wall, interactive mapping, and forums. Workshops with stakeholders explored unique selling points, strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats. They discussed governance, partnerships, funding, diversification, and potential game-changing projects.

This engagement set the stage for a community driven DMP with regional aspirations for a sustainable and regenerative tourism destination.

The Tairāwhiti DMP engagement process encountered challenges due to the impact of COVID. Despite these obstacles, a series of talks and online sessions were held throughout the region, attracting participants from various segments of the community.

Uniting Aspirations for Tairāwhiti's Future

While some aspirations were specific to communities, some came up time and time again that spoke to a shared regional view.

Strengthening Tairāwhiti Bonds

A recurring aspiration was the desire for whānau to return home to Tairāwhiti. To achieve this, there needs to be opportunities for sustainable employment or training, affordable housing, and amenities for everyone in the family.

Timeless Tairāwhiti Treasures

The natural attractions of Tairāwhiti have been enjoyed by locals and enticed visitors for generations. For the people of Tairāwhiti, the coastline and surf breaks, the rivers and the land are at the heart of it being a great place to live and a desirable place to visit. Throughout consultation, there was a strong view that tourism should support community and the environment to thrive. It should not cause harm. For Māori, there is a strong aspiration to establish effective mechanisms and opportunities that unlock the potential of Māori-owned land, supporting and empowering Māori communities in the region.

Fostering Wellbeing & Connections

Consultation highlighted a strong aspiration for the spiritual wellbeing of whānau, rangatahi and the wider community. There is a need for knowledge to be passed on, and transferred to rangatahi to ensure that they can never lose their way, and that there is a continued connection for them with who they are and where they are from.

Physical representations of traditions and knowledge should be visible throughout the region to strengthen connections among locals and highlight to visitors the spiritual and cultural significance of Tairāwhiti. To ensure that there is always a place or tether for rangatahi who whakapapa back to Tairāwhiti to connect to, communities expressed a need to ensure that marae and local whānau, hapū and iwi have strong succession plans for continuity into the future.

Sustaining Cultural Heritage

The community would like to see the tourism sector grow and shared the view that growth would provide holistic benefits for Tairāwhiti: socially, economically, culturally, and spiritually. However, growth or future projects and initiatives should not negatively impact the people of Tairāwhiti and their way of life. The community enjoys a wide range of recreation, creative and cultural activities they would like to see protected for future generations. They also feel a sense of freedom to express their art, histories, heritage, and traditions and would like this aspect to be preserved.

Destination Positioning

Secluded from the rest of the North Island, Tairāwhiti is a destination where visitors choose to make the journey to explore.

To entice visitors to venture off the beaten path, the destination needs to position itself as one-of-a-kind and captivating. Following consultation, four prominent themes emerged that guide destination positioning.

Pillar

Te Ao Māori Tapestry

Delve into the vibrant threads of Māori heritage and culture in Tairāwhiti, where authentic experiences and traditions intertwine. Embrace the region's warmth as the first to greet the dawn, a symbolic connection to the land's timeless spirit.

Nature's Playground Unleashed

Experience the untouched beauty of Tairāwhiti, where pristine coastlines, lush native forests, world-class surf breaks and cycle trails beckon adventurers to immerse themselves in nature's wonders.

③

Bountiful Harvest

Savour the delights of Tairāwhiti, whether it's the sampling the beautiful produce grown from the land, artisan treats from the farmers markets or freshly-caught kaimoana served at local restaurants, you'll be treated to a culinary journey.

Aroha-Fuelled Connections

Experience the genuine warmth and community spirit of Tairāwhiti, where visitors are embraced as whānau. Engage in heartwarming stories, witness local artistry, be welcomed with the hospitality that leaves lasting connections.

Embracing Opportunities

Infrastructural Advancements

The region's infrastructure offers expansion opportunities, notably State Highway 35. Forestry and weather challenges also enable community resilience. Campervan popularity signals potential need to improve waste management. Adapting to camping regulations can foster innovation. Ongoing infrastructure programs, led by Gisborne District Council, reflect their commitment to bettering connectivity, accessibility, and amenities. While not extensively outlined in the DMP, these initiatives highlight proactive efforts to enhance the region's appeal and improve the visitor experience.

Enhanced Public Transport

The limited public transportation options in the coastal and inland areas offer opportunities for expansion. While a basic passenger and courier service exists along State Highway 35, there is room to develop a more immersive tourism-focused transport service. Travel arrangements between Gisborne and Ōpōtiki can be facilitated through the local isite, opening doors for convenient and enjoyable exploration.

Accommodation Development

The limited availability of commercial accommodations in Gisborne signifies an opportunity for growth and development within the local tourism landscape. The gap presents a chance to attract investment and innovation in the hospitality sector, creating diverse stay options. There's also opportunity to extend this growth regionally. By promoting and supporting the establishment of lodging near popular tourist destinations, the region can tap into its full tourism potential. This expansion enhances visitor experiences, stimulates local economies, and contributes to a dynamic tourism industry.

Climate Change Resilience

The region's vulnerability to climate change provides a chance to proactively address potential impacts. By investing in resilient coastal infrastructure and adapting roads to changing sea levels, the region can ensure continued access to key destinations while minimising disruptions to businesses and communities. Such efforts can safeguard the visitor economy and protect natural assets.

Sustainable Environmental Management

Addressing ablution facilities in key visitor areas offers an opportunity to enhance environmental sustainability. Providing adequate facilities and waste management solutions not only benefits the environment but also strengthens the social acceptance of tourism. By integrating long-term waste and environmental management into community plans, the region can create a more appealing and responsible tourism destination.

Seasonality Diversification

The focus on spring and summer tourism presents an opportunity to diversify visitor traffic throughout the year. Encouraging events and activities during the shoulder months can extend the tourism season, providing more consistent opportunities for growth. Overcoming accommodation constraints during peak seasons can be achieved through creative solutions that accommodate organic visitor growth.

Retaining Local Talent

Addressing urban drift and retaining residents after high school can foster a skilled workforce and vibrant community. By creating education, employment, and lifestyle opportunities within the region, Tairāwhiti can retain its young talent and contribute to sustainable development.

Regional Balance

Balancing the benefits of the visitor economy across the region offers an opportunity for equitable growth. Developing paid experiences in coastal and rural areas, along with effective wayfinding, can attract travellers to smaller communities. This will result in a more widespread positive impact on local economies and enhance the overall visitor experience.

Preparedness for Natural Disasters

Given its susceptibility to natural disasters like tsunamis, the region can create opportunities by strengthening emergency response strategies. Incorporating visitor safety measures and communication plans into the region's disaster management can ensure a safer experience for travellers during such events.

Cruise Tourism

Cruise tourism presents an opportunity for Tairāwhiti to boost its local economy and raise its profile as a global tourism destination. Cruise ships can bring thousands of visitors to the region each year, who can spend money on goods and services, create jobs, and support local businesses. Cruise tourism can also help to promote the region's unique attractions to a wider audience, attracting more visitors in the future.

Regenerative Tourism

Regenerative tourism offers a holistic approach to tourism that aims to leave a destination better than it was found. Regenerative tourism practices will enhance the visitor experience by providing opportunities for visitors to learn about and connect with the local culture and environment. It will also improve the sustainability of the tourism industry by reducing its environmental impact and supporting local communities. Tairāwhiti can focus on supporting businesses and communities to adopt regenerative tourism practices and promoting the region as a destination for regenerative tourism.

Success Factors

Connecting Communities and Cultivating Collaboration: Building Tairāwhiti's Sustainable Visitor Economy.

To build and develop the visitor economy in Tairāwhiti, there is a crucial need for greater alignment and engagement between industry, stakeholders, and communities. The success of this plan relies on strong connections and providing engagement opportunities that will align the sector with the aspirations and values of the local communities. The plan aims to address some of these issues and promotes mutually beneficial collaborations across multiple sectors.

Promoting greater alignment and engagement will achieve a positive social license for the visitor economy. While some areas in the region may already enjoy a steady level of social license, there are communities that perceive tourism as potentially problematic. Some are concerned that an influx of tourists could disrupt their values and their way of life. In this context, it is essential to build trust and understanding between the tourism industry and communities. This plan works towards solutions that mitigate negative impacts and enhance the overall social license for tourism.

The visitor economy should not solely be an economic endeavour but also a means of supporting the community's wellbeing on social, cultural, spiritual, and environmental levels. Tourism can uplift communities by providing economic opportunities, preserving cultural heritage, and protecting the natural environment.

By aligning the tourism sector with the visions and aspirations of the local people, the plan seeks to ensure that tourism development benefits the community at large.

The plan advocates for a collaborative approach involving various sectors working together towards common objectives. Cross-sector collaboration allows for a comprehensive understanding of the region's needs and the identification of solutions that can benefit everyone involved. Engaging stakeholders from different segments of the community has enabled a more holistic perspective, leading to regenerative tourism practices.

By fostering alignment and engagement between industry, stakeholders, and communities, the plan will ensure that tourism becomes a force for positive change.

Stronger Iwi Partnerships

The iwi partners across Tairāwhiti have a significant role in ensuring the vision of this plan can be achieved. At times, the relationship between sector stakeholders and iwi partners can be seen as transactional, or approaches are made after the project has been completed. Iwi, local government, and regional partners can be stronger partners, by working together at local and iwi rohe levels to boost shared prosperity and community wellbeing. Stronger partnerships, transparency and open lines of communication should be fostered.

While there is a level of connection and partnership shared between iwi and local government, it remains a shared aspiration that this partnership is strengthened. Meaningful consultation and collaboration will result in stronger benefits for the visitor economy and communities. It will also result in better decision-making and lasting solutions for the region.

Collaborative and Connected Leadership

Collaborative and effective leadership and governance will help ensure that opportunities are maximised, and decisions that affect the entire region are made in consultation with relevant partners. This will also ensure an increased connection, which is a key recommendation to maximise the growth potential of the visitor economy.

The geographical size of Tairāwhiti is significant, and there are many agencies and stakeholders who play important roles in the management, development, and marketing of the destination. Role clarity, collaborative leadership, and greater connection have been identified as a key element to support growth.

Empower People of Tairāwhiti

Valuing the people of Tairāwhiti is integral to achieving the plan's aspirations. From the education sector and the role they play in providing future career pathways, to support programmes for start-up businesses, through to larger scale initiatives for organisations looking to scale up their operations, there are a range of potential sector enablement opportunities that would empower people.

There is a need to grow the number of export ready products available, with sustainable commission structures to appeal to international markets. As the domestic market has traditionally always been strong for Tairāwhiti, there is potential to open the region to international markets through developed export ready experiences.

Given the high number of Māori in the population there would be benefit in ensuring that there is a suite of kaupapa Māori programmes that can assist with iwi development within the tourism sector, and for them to achieve the aspirations articulated within their individual iwi flight plans.

Destination management requires adequate resourcing, both financial and human to achieve success. This should also include a level of focus within local government avenues such as Annual and Long-Term plans.

There is a lack of experiences available for visitors to engage with. There needs to be a focus on this development to give visitors a reason to stay, and the ability to spend more money in Tairāwhiti. While increasing supply will enable growth in the visitor-economy, stakeholders, industry, and iwi need to ensure these experiences are complementary, inviting visitors to stay longer.

There is also a need to ensure current experience assets that support the arts and creative sectors are not lost. This includes live music venues, theatre companies, music clubs, events, cinemas, and galleries. These activities and assets have a dual benefit. Many operate after hours which increases the opportunity to draw revenue into the region and can be packaged with other tourism experiences to develop multi-day itineraries.

Our Shared Vision for Tairāwhiti

To create a definitive pathway forward for the region, it is necessary to understand where the journey is taking us, essentially what the shared vision is for Tairāwhiti.

The visitor-sector is an enabler for communities within the region, and many have a desire to see the sector grow, offer employment, and deliver compelling reasons for visitors to journey through to the region. There is an expectation that benefits from this growth should be delivered to both the people and the place of Tairāwhiti, and ensure positive impacts socially, culturally, environmentally, economically, and spiritually.

Community sentiment addresses that growth in the sector should not come at the expense of what the people hold most dear. This includes the natural and cultural assets, the ability and freedom to express the culture, arts, heritage and traditions, and the ability to connect with whānau and enable smaller communities to thrive.

Shared Vision

Promote sustainable growth in the visitor economy of Tairāwhiti, enhancing the social, cultural, environmental, economic, and spiritual wellbeing of the community. Preserve and share our unique way of life, fostering a legacy of prosperity and cultural exchange for future generations.

Economic Ōhanga

Build a diversified and resilient economy through regenerative tourism, supporting businesses and a sustainable workforce.

¹Like Hawaiki, Rangiātea is seen by Māori as both a physical place and a spiritual realm – the fount of wisdom about the nature of existence.

Guiding Principles

Growth holds diverse meanings for different individuals, and measuring success varies based on location and social acceptance of tourism.

While the region enjoys a positive social license for tourism, the abundance of culturally and historically significant areas and the expectation of social, cultural, environmental, economic, and spiritual benefits necessitate prudent management of growth. Throughout the planning process, shared principles emerged, guiding strategic priorities:

- Value our heritage and taonga > ensure the histories and stories shared are factual and authorised to ensure that they are valued.
- Lead lives that align with our values > ensure that tourism does not negatively impact the people within the region but supports their way of life.
- Embrace the role of hosts with empowerment for our visitors > uphold manaakitanga, empowering hosts to provide enriching experiences to visitors.
- Value over volume > develop and manage growth for the sector, attracting higher value visitors to the destination.
- Genuine people to people interactions > deliver experiences that allow visitors to engage with the natural environment and hear the stories from locals, told their way.
- Tangible and positive outcomes for communities > provide tangible, visible, and real outcomes for the communities of the region.

Goals

- Greater alignment and engagement
> foster stronger collaboration and engagement among industry, stakeholders, and communities.
- Promote social acceptance > encourage a favourable social acceptance for the visitor economy in the region.
- Enhance community benefits
> Enhance the visitor economy's potential to generate significant benefits for the community.
- Champion regenerative tourism practices > support and promote the adoption of regenerative tourism practices by businesses and communities in the region.

Strategic Priorities

Strategic Priorities

The strategic priorities set a pathway to the shared vision of the plan. The recommendations that fall beneath the priorities are designed to maximise the region's strengths and opportunities, while mitigating and managing the challenges.

Governance over this plan will be held by the Tairāwhiti destination advisory group (TDAG), with the support of Trust Tairāwhiti. The TDAG will play a critical role in the implementation of the plan. The group will set the annual activity plan, allocate lead agencies for each action, monitor, and evaluate the progress of the plan, and ensure that lead and partner agencies are working together effectively. By playing these roles, the group will help to ensure that the DMP is successfully implemented, and that Tairāwhiti achieves its shared vision.

Strategic Priority Two

Support Experience Development

There are distinct differences in the offerings between those within Gisborne, and the potential that exists around the coast and townships of Tairāwhiti. There is an identified lack of experiences within both that, if addressed, would encourage a longer stay and create compelling reasons to visit the region. Increasing supply will enable growth in the visitor economy and opportunities for achieving community aspirations. We must ensure these experiences are complementary and strengthen the unique destination positioning.

LEAD	ACTIONS	SUCCESS INDICATORS

Strategic Priority Three Protect Destination Assets

The protection of natural and cultural assets in Tairāwhiti is an important aspiration shared by its communities. The cultural connections and stories offer unique destination positioning. The desire to ensure natural assets are maintained, enhanced, and protected for future generations is strong. The combination of both provides compelling reasons for visitors to choose Tairāwhiti as a destination.

LEAD	ACTIONS	SUCCESS INDICATORS
⑤ Conserve Natural Assets	Ⓐ Enable operators to support natural regeneration initiatives.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Increased stakeholder satisfaction with governance effectiveness. ✓ Demonstrated impact of sustainable policies on the environment and community. ✓ Regular performance evaluations to track and improve progress.

	Ⓒ Support operators to measure their footprint and reduce impacts.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Clearly defined roles and seamless communication channels. ✓ Achieved outcomes as defined in the collaboration agreement. ✓ Measurable progress and impact of joint initiatives.
	Ⓓ Enhance wayfinding signage that acknowledges the significance of each location for visitors and communities.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Aligned objectives and increased cross-regional tourism with neighbouring RTOs. ✓ Growth in visitor expenditure and joint storytelling initiatives. ✓ Demonstrable economic benefits for both regions.
⑥ Preserve Cultural Assets	Ⓐ Work with mana whenua to determine the narratives to be shared with visitors.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Infrastructure upgrades made in response to advocacy efforts. ✓ Enhanced digital connectivity for residents and visitors. ✓ Frequent communication and updates between agencies.
	Ⓑ Champion the cultural narrative for all businesses, both indigenous and non-indigenous.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Increased involvement and participation of industry associations. ✓ Growth in cross-sector partnerships and collaborations.
	Ⓒ Work with Māori landowners to understand their aspirations and support their initiatives.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Higher participation in community surveys and positive feedback. ✓ Proactive responses addressing community concerns. ✓ Improved public perception of tourism's positive impacts.

Strategic Priority Four Enhance Destination Marketing

There is a lack of awareness about Tairāwhiti among domestic and international visitors. This is not just about the geographic location, but also not knowing what there is to do within the region. To build awareness it is essential there are effective destination marketing campaigns that build on the history, stories and taonga, and highlight the values of Tairāwhiti.

LEAD	ACTIONS	SUCCESS INDICATORS
⑦ Build Destination Awareness	Ⓐ Define the destination positioning and determine the best marketing and development pillars.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Market research insights for destination positioning. ✓ Implementation of sustainable growth strategies. ✓ Collaboration with stakeholders for effective marketing and development.
	Ⓑ Align brand identity and tone of voice with destination positioning.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Consistent brand identity across all marketing efforts. ✓ Authentic representation of the destination's culture. ✓ Resonance with the target audience through the brand's tone of voice.
	Ⓒ Enable events that align with the destination's positioning.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Evaluate event relevance to destination positioning. ✓ Measure visitor attendance, satisfaction, and economic impact. ✓ Increase the number and diversity of events during shoulder and off-seasons.
	Ⓓ Develop campaigns that attract visitors to all parts of Tairāwhiti.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Consistent brand identity across all marketing efforts. ✓ Authentic representation of the destination's culture. ✓ Resonance with the target audience.
	Ⓔ Elevate the global presence of Tairāwhiti through a trade marketing strategy.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Track new partnerships to expand destination reach. ✓ Attend trade events that align with target markets. ✓ Attend industry events TECNZ, Trenz and IBO Days.
⑧ Align Regional Messaging	Ⓐ Develop tools, including digital resources, guidelines, and templates, to align with the regional message.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Adoption rate of marketing tools by operators. ✓ Percentage of aligned marketing materials. ✓ Operator feedback on tool effectiveness. ✓ Improved brand consistency.
	Ⓑ Identify appropriate domestic and international partners to expand knowledge of the region.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Number of successful partnerships. ✓ Increase in brand awareness. ✓ Growth in visitors from collaborative promotions.
	Ⓒ Develop a strong and distinctive brand identity.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ✓ Alignment of the new brand identity with the destination's positioning. ✓ Consistent use of the new brand identity across all marketing channels. ✓ Community buy-in and support for the new brand identity.

Tairāwhiti Destination Profile

The Tairāwhiti is a region located at the north eastern tip of the North Island of New Zealand. It covers an area of 10,800 square kilometres and the main urban centre in the region is Gisborne.

The Tairāwhiti region is diverse with a wide range of geographical features. The western boundary is formed by the Raukumara Range, a rugged mountain range with peaks of over 1,000 meters. The eastern coast is characterised by sandy beaches, cliffs, and headlands. The interior of the region is a mix of rolling hills and farmland.

Tairāwhiti has a humid climate with warm summers and mild winters. The average annual rainfall is approximately 1,200 millimetres. The region is also prone to cyclones, which can occur during the summer months.

According to Statistics New Zealand, the population of Tairāwhiti as of June 2022 was 49,100. This represents a 1.6% increase from the 2018 Census. The population of Tairāwhiti is relatively young, with a median age of 37.0 years. This is slightly lower than the national median age of 37.4 years. Tairāwhiti has a high proportion of Māori people, with 53% of the population identifying as Māori. This is significantly higher than the national average of 16.5%. The population of Tairāwhiti is concentrated in the Gisborne urban area, home to approximately 75% of the region's population. The remaining population is spread out across several smaller towns and rural areas.

Access

The main drive access into Gisborne is via SH2 from the north and south, or the more scenic SH 35. Due to its geographical isolation, visitors who arrive in Gisborne, have travelled with the intent of visiting the district as there are no other destinations beyond its borders.

There is a bus terminal in Gisborne with links to Auckland, Manukau, Hamilton, Rotorua, Hastings, Napier, Palmerston North and Wellington. There are no inter-regional bus routes so access from Gisborne city out into the rural areas of the district are limited for those who make their way to the district by bus.

There is an airport within Gisborne which provides air links through to Auckland and Wellington. It has a single terminal with two tarmac gates.

Regional Economy

According to Infometrics (2023), the Tairāwhiti economy grew by 5.4% in 2022, driven by strong demand for agricultural and forestry products from overseas markets, increased visitor numbers to Tairāwhiti from both domestic and international markets, and investment in new infrastructure and businesses in the region.

Employment in Tairāwhiti also increased by 2.9% in 2022, to 24,650 people. This growth rate was lower than the national average of 3.0%, but it was still a positive sign for the Tairāwhiti economy.

The unemployment rate in Tairāwhiti fell from 6.6% in 2021 to 3.9% in 2022. This decline in unemployment was due to strong job growth in the primary industries, manufacturing, and tourism sectors.

Mean annual earnings in Tairāwhiti were $60,355 in the year to March 2022, which was lower than the national average of $69,585. However, mean earnings in Tairāwhiti increased by 5.1% over the year to March 2022, compared with an increase of 5.6% in New Zealand.

The main industries in Tairāwhiti are primary industries (agriculture, forestry, and fishing), manufacturing (food and beverage processing, wood processing, and metal fabrication), tourism (accommodation, food and beverage services, and recreation and cultural activities), retail, healthcare, and education.

The outlook for the Tairāwhiti economy is positive. GDP growth is expected to continue in the coming years, driven by growth in the primary industries and tourism sectors. Employment growth is also expected to continue, and the unemployment rate is expected to fall further.

There are some challenges facing the Tairāwhiti economy. These include a relatively small and isolated economy, a high proportion of people who are self-employed or unemployed, and a lower-than-average skill level in the workforce.
